mayor's letter

Dear Residents:

In 2012, the City of Chicago invested millions in our local arts sector while presenting thousands of dynamic cultural programs for all to enjoy. This support not only improved the quality of life for our artists and residents, but also contributed to inspiring thousands of young creative minds and attracting millions of visitors along with several multi-national corporations to Chicago.

Also, in 2012, the Department of Cultural Affairs and Special Events (DCASE) asked you to share your ideas for shaping a cultural vision for Chicago. Thousands participated in a series of community conversations and town hall meetings to share their thoughts, concerns and vision for the future of our city's cultural life. The result: the Chicago Cultural Plan 2012, which includes hundreds of recommendations identifying ways the arts can build community, stimulate economic development, create jobs, attract and grow tourism, and foster innovation.

Since the world's first skyscrapers rose from the ashes of the Great Chicago Fire, the City of Chicago and its residents have worked tirelessly to position themselves at the forefront of art, culture and innovation. The blues were electrified on Maxwell Street and house music was born in our basements. Our cutting-edge theater district and comedy venues continue to delight and entertain audiences the world over. Chicago's culture is an integral part of world culture.

Our great culture has defined us as a truly global city and created an undeniable link between the value of arts and our prosperity. My administration and DCASE are committed to continuing and strengthening this great tradition.

Sincerely,

Rahm Emanuel

commissioner's letter

Dear Friends:

One of my biggest joys in 2012 was working with the team at the Department of Cultural Affairs and Special Events (DCASE) to craft a new Cultural Plan for Chicago. Released in October 2012, the Plan—the first of its kind in over 25 years—created a framework to guide the city's future cultural and economic growth. One where the arts are accessible to all, cultural activities are abundant in every neighborhood and citizens and visitors alike can experience Chicago's diverse and vibrant arts scene.

During the intensive year-long process, we met thousands of Chicagoans from nearly every neighborhood across the city to hear ideas and collect recommendations on how best to advance an arts agenda for us all. We quickly realized that one of the best ways to accomplish the many ambitious goals articulated in the Plan was to be smarter and more strategic in using City resources in creative ways. This notion serves as one of the important pillars of the Chicago Cultural Plan 2012: Planning Culturally. Planning culturally helps to leverage the City of Chicago's many cultural assets and resources across multiple City departments and agencies to promote culture, grow Chicago's economy and ultimately improve our quality of life.

Throughout 2012, DCASE presented nearly 2,000 programs, services and events, most of which were free to the public. The department employed hundreds of local artists, partnered with a variety of arts organizations and also continued to invest in strengthening the capacity of Chicago's cultural sector by awarding more than $1 million in grants to cultural groups and individual artists.

DCASE remains committed to supporting Chicago's arts community and making our city's vast cultural resources accessible to all of our residents. To that end, the entire DCASE team is proud to serve Mayor Rahm Emanuel and the citizens of Chicago.

Sincerely,

Michelle T. Boone

Chicago Cultural Plan 2012 your city. your vision. your plan.

your city.

In February 2012, the Department of Cultural Affairs and Special Events (DCASE) launched the public process for the Chicago Cultural Plan – the first of its kind since 1986 – creating a blueprint for Chicago to elevate its profile as a global capital for creativity, innovation and excellence in the arts.

Funded by Allstate Insurance Company, The Chicago Community Trust and the Illinois Arts Council, the public engagement campaign was led by Lord Cultural Resources.

Participation by Chicagoans was essential, as every Chicago resident is a stakeholder in making the plan a reality and maximizing our cultural assets.

Chicago's cultural life is a cause for celebration. We have the third largest creative economy in the U.S., with:

- 24,000 arts enterprises
- Nearly 650 non-profit arts organizations
- Economic impact of $2.2 billion a year
- 60,000 jobs in creative industries

Source: Arts & Economic Prosperity IV: The Economic Impact of Nonprofit Arts and Culture Organizations and Their Audiences in the City of Chicago, Americans for the Arts.

your vision.

The Chicago Cultural Plan gave Chicago the opportunity to use its collective imagination to construct a city based on arts and culture.

Throughout the spring and summer, DCASE collected feedback from the public:

- 8 town halls
- 20 neighborhood conversations
- 50+ additional cultural conversations and meetings
- 1,500 Twitter followers
- 4,700+ in-person engagements
- 16,000+ downloads of the draft plan
- 35,000+ people reached online

At town hall meetings during the planning process, participants were asked to define “Culture.”

Residents voted in community meetings and online to clearly identify three top priorities for the Cultural Plan:

- Foster arts education and lifelong learning
- Attract and retain artists and creative professionals
- Promote culture as a fundamental driver of prosperity

DCASE released the draft plan in July 2012.

your plan.

In October 2012, DCASE unveiled the final plan, which includes:

4 categories

- People
- Places
- Policies
- Planning Culturally

10 priorities

- Foster arts education and lifelong learning
- Attract and retain artists and creative professionals
- Elevate and expand neighborhood cultural assets
- Facilitate neighborhood cultural planning
- Strengthen capacity of cultural sector
- Optimize City policies and regulations
- Promote the value and impact of culture
- Strengthen Chicago as a global cultural destination
- Foster cultural innovation
- Integrate culture into daily life

36 recommendations

200+ initiatives

Throughout the Fall of 2012, DCASE worked diligently to implement the plan, making great strides toward 20 percent completion of the 241 initiatives by January 31, 2013.

cultural grants program

For more than 25 years, the City of Chicago has been committed to providing grants to support the local arts and culture community, investing more than $36 million since 1987. The Cultural Grants Program has continued to grow and develop each year with the arts community it serves. In 2012, the Department of Cultural Affairs and Special Events proudly continued this work, providing over 500 grants totaling more than $1.2 million to non-profit organizations and individual artists. The grants provided operating funds, supported the creation of new work, enhanced professional development for artists and supported instructional arts programs in underserved communities. Grants were awarded through four distinct programs.

Cultural Outreach Program

The Cultural Outreach Program funds high-quality instructional arts programming for disadvantaged youth, the elderly and persons with disabilities in underserved communities citywide. This programming is artistically or culturally unique; encourages the development of Chicago artists; and ensures that the programming is participatory, engaging and challenging to participants. In 2012, DCASE provided grants to 25 non-profit organizations.

CityArts Program

The CityArts Program is designed to assist Chicago's non-profit arts and culture community through general operating support. In 2012, the program provided funds in five distinct categories: emerging arts organizations with annual cash income of less than $150,000; developing arts organizations with annual cash income between $150,000 and $500,000; mid-sized arts organizations with annual cash income between $500,000 and $2 million; cultural arts institutions with an annual income of $2 million and higher; and social service agencies providing arts programming. In 2012, CityArts supported 235 non-profit organizations across the city of Chicago.

Community Arts Assistance Program

The Community Arts Assistance Program was created through funding provided by the Illinois Arts Council's Community Arts Access program with goals to: discover, nurture and expand Chicago's multi-ethnic artists and non-profit arts organizations—to foster new and emerging individual artists and arts groups by providing grants for professional, artistic and organizational development to those who have had limited access to funding in both public and private grant programs. In 2012, DCASE supported 189 individual artists and 42 non-profit organizations through this program.

Neighborhood Arts Program

The Neighborhood Arts Program encourages and supports the presentation of high-quality instructional arts programs benefitting at-risk youth, seniors or persons with disabilities in Chicago's underserved neighborhoods. Individual artists with demonstrated teaching and/or performing experience in these communities seek funding to provide works or touring performances suitable for Chicago Housing Authority and Chicago Park District facilities, community centers, schools or facilities serving senior citizens or persons with disabilities. In 2012, DCASE supported 26 individuals through this program.

2012 highlights

American Theater Company (ATC) (Cultural Outreach Program)

American Theater Company's American Mosaic Program offers ninth-grade students a six-week integrated arts education residency program that culminates in a final performance for peers and family members on ATC's home stage. For this program, American Theater Company partners with six Chicago Public Schools in the following neighborhoods: Albany Park, Humboldt Park, Logan Square, West Town, North Center and Gage Park. Eighty-five percent of students served through this program come from underserved families. American Mosaic approaches dramatic literature through two lenses—literary and performance—and exposes students to a theater arts curriculum taught by highly qualified teaching artists.

Kartemquin Films (CityArts Program)

Kartemquin Films is a home for independent filmmakers making documentary films as a vehicle to deepen our understanding of society through everyday human drama. The organization focuses on people whose lives are most directly affected by social and political change and who are often overlooked or misrepresented by the media. As a locally and nationally recognized media arts organization, Kartemquin acts as a trusted bridge between communities and the media; fosters the growth of emerging film voices passionate about social issues and media policy; and encourages staff and stakeholders to play a role in advocating for a strong public media. In 2012, Kartemquin was involved in the production of 12 films.

Nina Rosalind Dante (Community Arts Assistance Program)

Nina is a classically trained singer who received a Bachelor of Arts in Vocal Performance from Northwestern University in 2010. After graduation, Nina decided to specialize in vocal New Music and, in 2012, created a yearlong concert series of New Music, featuring the voice within a contemporary chamber ensemble of dedicated musicians and composer Pablo Chin. The five new works composed for this series were performed in diverse venues across Chicago including concert halls, theaters and music-promoting cafés. The works were also performed in New York City and internationally in San Jose, Costa Rica.

Daniel Godston (Neighborhood Arts Program)

Daniel has been leading interdisciplinary arts workshops and classes with youth for more than a decade, providing instruction in creative writing, visual arts (collage, painting, sculpture), audio and musical instrument building. His workshops have taken place in public schools in Chicago and Oak Park, hospitals, retirement centers and community centers. In 2012, Daniel received support from DCASE to facilitate an intergenerational arts project involving 7th and 8th grade students at Josephine Locke Elementary School and the elderly residents of the Bethesda Home over the course of 15 weeks. Participants created art using creative writing, music, collage and musical instrument building and focused on stories and worldviews shared between creative teens and elderly people.

“For smaller non-profits like The Arts of Life, the Chicago Cultural Grant has a huge impact. It allows us to supply art making materials for our artists, transport artists from their homes to the studio and back, and supports our growth in the wider community. Our shared vision was to create a working, person-centric and artistic community that provided a work environment of equality. Grants like the Chicago Cultural Grant allow us to keep this vision a reality every day.”

—The Arts of Life, Inc.,
CityArts Program Grantee

“The DCASE grants have given me the opportunity to complete a variety of projects relating to my artistic development, and I appreciate the support I have received... Focus, responsibility for the work and deadlines are all useful tools for artists, and the financial support I have received from DCASE has been a source of motivation for me to continue my work and to dream of ways to grow as an artist.”

“PepsiCo is proud to partner with the City of Chicago on a number of outstanding cultural events and programs. These events, specifically Taste of Chicago, provide great opportunities for our large and diverse portfolio of brands to reach and engage directly in a fun and interactive way with key consumers.”

—Todd Eveland, Vice President for the Midwest Region, PepsiCo North America Beverages

“The Trust was eager to resume its role as a supporter of the Chicago Cultural Plan, having been a funder of both the 1965 and 1986 plans. In recognition of the wealth of information now available online, the City's community engagement efforts included the use of our newly compiled Cultural Vitality Indicators that served to inform all those that participated in the planning process.”

—Terry Mazany, President and CEO, The Chicago Community Trust

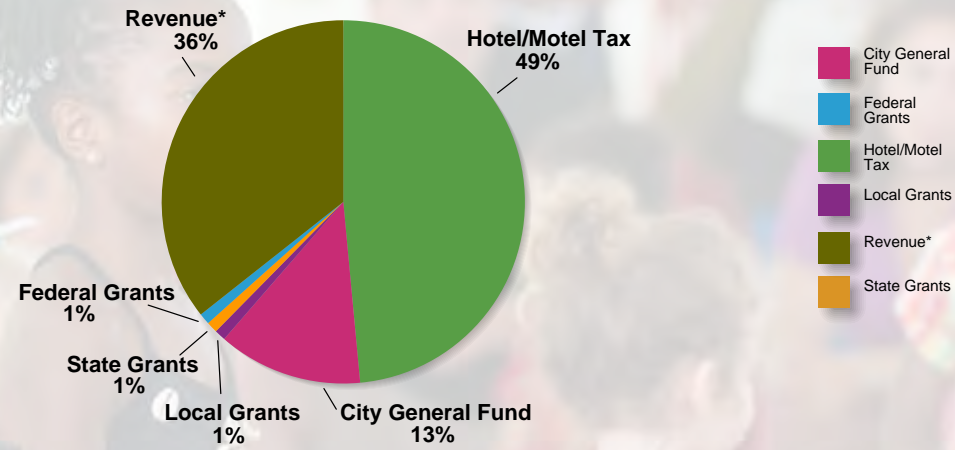

“We applaud the Department of Cultural Affairs and Special Events for making a long-term commitment to nurture cultural growth throughout the city. This new civic and cultural plan will enrich lives across the city by tapping into the pride, energy and skills Chicago has in abundance.”

—Thomas J. Wilson, Chairman, President and Chief Executive Officer, Allstate Insurance Company
